"Jacob Kibler, one of the representative and prominent farmers of Eagle township, Hancock County, is a native of Ohio, his birth having occurred eight miles east of Wooster in Wayne County, on the 17th of January 1834. In 1837 he was brought to Hancock Co. by his parents, George and Emeline Hays Kibler, who were married in Wayne County. His father was a native of Virginia and his mother of Arkansas, she being born in state while her father was stationed there as an officer in the War of 1812. Our subject's paternal grandfather served all through the Revolutionary War. Both he and his wife were born in the Old Dominion of German ancestry and the latter lived to be over 100 years of age.

On coming to Hancock County in 1837, George Kibler had to cut his own road for a distance of ten miles from Findlay and owing to high water and other obstacles he was three days in making the journey. He settled near Arlington in Madison township, where he entered land and at once turned his attention to its improvement and cultivation. His brother John, who accompanied him to this county also entered a tract of government land, where he lived until his death, dying of cholera during the epidemic of that dread disease. The father of our subject died at the age of 45 when Jacob was only 14 years of age. His other children were Luther, who died in Hancock County at the age of 30, Mary Ann became the wife of Adam Wagner and died at the age of 50 years; the result of an accident; Isabel married Nels Westcott and died at the age of 35. Washington, who now lives in Colfax County, Nebraska, served through the Civil War and was captured at Harper's Ferry, after being wounded. After his exchange he rejoined his command and remained at the front until hostilities ceased. After the death of her first husband, the mother of these children married Thomas Wheeler, who took charge of the home farm but spent his last days in retirement from labor in Arlington, where both he and his wife died, both being about 73 years of age at the time of their deaths. By this union there were also five children: Holmes, Emeline, Millie, Joseph and Milton.
